

Abstract

What is disclosed is a a pressure limiting valve comprising a valve body, the axial movement of which is damped by means of a damping device. In accordance with the invention, the damping device includes a damping chamber formed on the return side, that is subjected to the system pressure acting on a pressure port.